

THE PLAY BOX AT JAKOBSPLATZ IN NUREMBERG

Here to stay

KuKuk Box

For the “Spielbox am Jakobsplatz”, a shipping container was converted to provide children with multiple levels offering plenty of opportunities for playing, climbing, balancing, and exploring.

ATTRACTION

The “Spielbox am Jakobsplatz” in Nuremberg was opened in January 2025. Not only is it another attraction in the city centre, it also makes shopping much easier for families, because the children now like to come with them.

The city of Nuremberg, as the client, is making a clear statement in favour of better quality of life in the heart of the city, especially for families.

The idea was realised thanks to funding of €57,000 from the Bavarian State Government’s Inner City Revitalisation Fund and around €50,000 from the municipal playground replacement fund. The aim of the project is to make the city centre more family-friendly and to liven it up as a meeting place.

The facility was created by KuKuk Box from Stuttgart.

MOVEMENT

Children learn best through play and movement, and the Spielebox at Jakobsplatz offers exactly that – in a compact space, since our inner cities weren’t really designed with children in mind.

The KuKuk Box combines a container with diverse play opportunities. The container provides structure, storage, a lounge, and shelter from the weather, while its additions and attachments offer pure adventure.

While the children explore and play, parents can relax or go shopping.

A PROVEN CONCEPT

After examining several locations, the city of Nuremberg decided on Jakobsplatz because it is often visited by families, but a permanently installed playground is not feasible there.

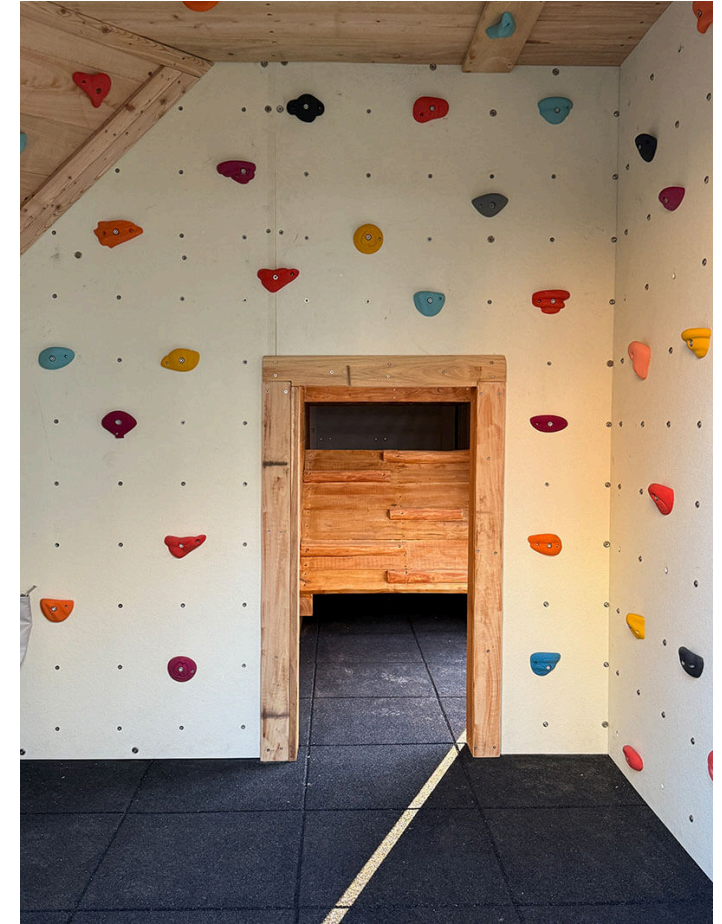

The games box at Jakobsplatz was designed to be extremely flexible. It can be used for events like World Children’s Day or the Children’s Carnival, and it can also be temporarily dismantled.

Mobile play containers by KuKuk Box have already been used at several locations in Nuremberg. These experiences showed that, with creativity and technical finesse, an attractive play environment can be created in a limited space. ## Mission

It all started many years ago with the dream to build a playground in the Gaza Strip.

The ideal solution seemed to be a standardized container designed by us that was easy to transport and quick to set up. The idea quickly became a prototype for conflict areas all over the world.

And not just there. Wherever there are children, they want to play. Our play containers can satisfy this essential need in the smallest of spaces and in almost any setting – in good times and bad.
